Diversity and professionalism. Two words that can describe Jody William Baxmeyer as an actor. He has a dominating passion to grab every opportunity to read a script, whether for an audition or for a take. The craft itself is what he enjoys, the process. Shying away from the premiere, but always early on call time, is a fair way of describing him.

Jody loves the odd and offbeat as much as he loves building characters from the ground up. From crafting backstories to shaping emotional depth, he sees each role as part of a team-built art form. Decades of amateur sports in Canada instilled a love of collaboration, and acting rekindled that spirit after he moved to the U.S. to pursue the arts.

For Jody, the set feels like home—where teamwork and creativity collide.
