JODY BAXMEYER

If there is one thing Jody Baxmeyer strives for, it is the belief that a true actor can play any role. When asked about his “type,” his answer is simple: actor. For Jody, the job is about deeply understanding a character’s circumstances and grounding himself in authentic personalization.

A former Canadian broadcaster and lifelong amateur athlete, Jody is now a dual American citizen who studies regularly with the Howard Fine Acting Studio in Los Angeles. For him, the unique thrill of being on set mirrors the camaraderie and high stakes of the sports pitch. Acting has given him his team back—making the set a place where he feels completely at ease, comfortable, and at home.

I love acting.
I love the entire process.

Having someone ask me to audition, getting to know another human perspective, walking on set, making friends, and creating together. Anyone should consider themselves fortunate to work creatively.
